Steven E. Bledsoe

Steve Bledsoe is a trial lawyer specializing in high stakes complex litigation. Mr. Bledsoe has successfully defended corporate clients in dozens of matters including breach of contract, consumer class action, fraud, health care, intellectual property, securities, trusts and estates, real estate and insurance coverage litigation.

Mr. Bledsoe has tried cases before juries, judges and arbitrators and has represented clients in a variety of industries including aerospace, automotive, consumer wholesale, defense, electronics, energy, entertainment, health care, food and beverage, satellite television, and software.

Mr. Bledsoe has also led numerous corporate internal investigations, including an internal investigation concerning one of the largest alleged Medicare frauds in U.S. history and, most recently, an internal investigation involving tens of millions of dollars in missing investor funds.

Mr. Bledsoe's recent trial work includes obtaining a complete defense verdict after a three week bench trial in a multi-million dollar breach of contract and fraud case. Mr. Bledsoe also served as a co-lead trial counsel in an international arbitration with hundreds of millions of dollars at stake.

Mr. Bledsoe graduated, magna cum laude, from the J. Reuben Clark Law School at Brigham Young University, where he was a member of the law review. Following law school, Mr. Bledsoe spent 16 years at Kirkland & Ellis where he was an equity partner.
